Welcome and Introduction

- Structured writing instruction + specific teacher or peer feedback = improvement in linguistically diverse students' writing
- By the end of this session, you will be able to:
 1. Define instructional scaffolds;
 2. Explain the five phases of academic writing;
 3. List and explain strategic scaffolds to build and strengthen students' academic writing during each phase of the academic writing process.

Self-Reflection Tool

Conference...

- Validate current practices
- Reinvigorate dormant/underused practices
- Learn new practices
- Inspire individuals to seek out more information on particular practices

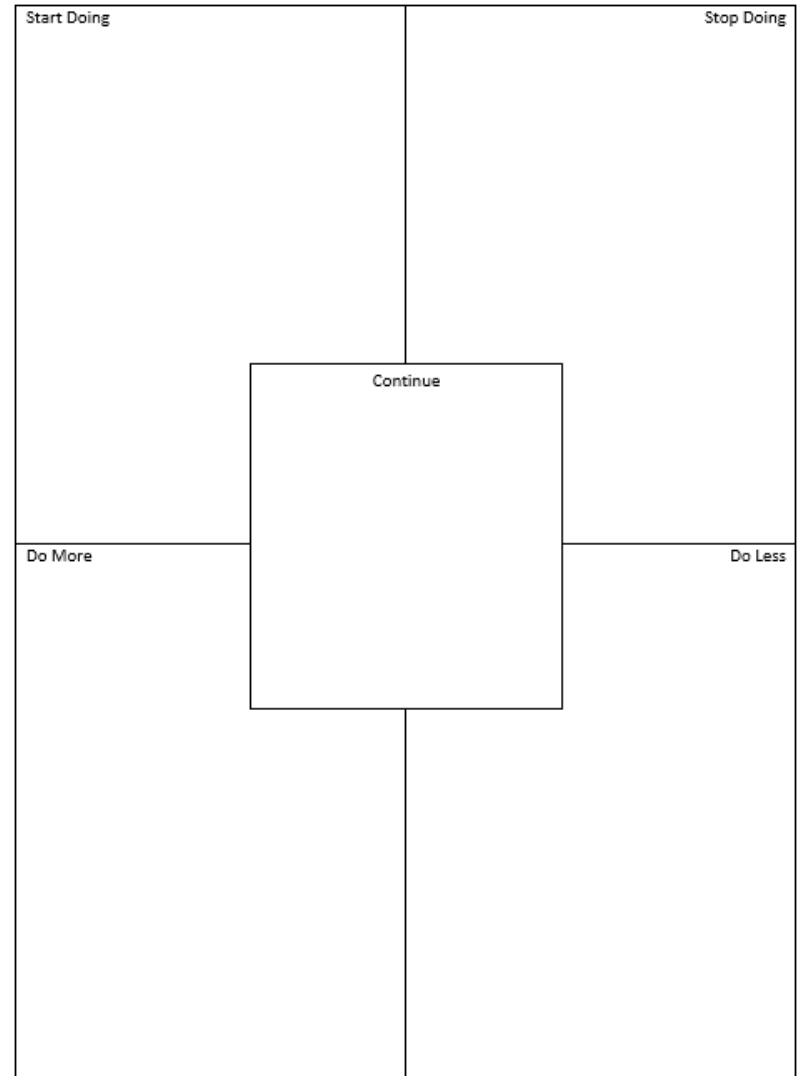

Table Talk

The brain is a pattern-seeking device, designed not to have to think.

Discussion Question:

What implications does this fact have on writing instruction,
particularly for English learners?

Purpose of Scaffolding

- Temporary help that assists a learner to move toward new concepts, levels of understanding, and new language
- Enables a learner to know how to do something (not just what to do), so that they will be better able to complete similar tasks alone

Scaffolding is Future-Oriented

Zoo Field Trip

Dear Mr. _____ and Mrs. _____,

• organized text structure = problem, proposed solution, positive supporting reasons

We have a problem. The wildlife here in _____ is very limited. There is not a lot of opportunity to learn about conservation and wildlife preservation. If we took a field trip to _____ our problem would be solved. _____ and I would like to take our class for a great learning experience. In addition, we will provide a study guide to _____ to identify the animals and provide information about conservation of endangered wildlife.

problem

proposed solution

introduces a topic clearly

If we went on a field trip, we will learn about the wildlife from around the world and how _____ provides a natural habitat for them to live and breed. This information would help us to understand the importance of science in our day to day lives. We would use money to make a budget and figure out a way to earn money. These skills will be very useful again and again. We will learn how to make a schedule with target dates. This will provide us with a plan that covers the entire project from start to finish. The preparation of the study guide will require lots of research and organization of information.

provides reasons that are supported by facts and details

• links opinions and reasons using words and phrases

The first thing to do is research, research, research. Next, we will choose a fund raiser (with your approval, of course). This will earn money for the field trip. The parents will hopefully chip in their time and money, if we don't get enough. We will prepare a plan schedule. This will provide the dates that team members will need to accomplish the steps toward our goal. My competent adult model is the Unofficial Guide to Walt Disney World. It shows us step by step how to plan a trip and what to see.

Now, you are asking why should I approve a trip to _____? How does this help _____ and the students? Besides the fact that the project planning, fund raising, budgeting and reporting will provide an excellent learning opportunity, it will provide education. It will also provide awareness of wildlife and the importance of conservation. This project will be evaluated by its successful planning and its ability to involve our class in wildlife conservation. The trip will be evaluated by the student participation on the trip and a plan of conservation that identifies what we can all do to protect and respect wildlife so they will still be around when we have children.

• provides a concluding section relating to the opinion presented

Correct capitalization and punctuation

PRO/CON: Are we ready for self-driving cars?

By Tribune News Service, adapted by Newsela staff on 03.11.16
Word Count 1,130

PRO: In many ways, self-driving cars are already here

Americans are more than ready for a car that drives itself. In fact, we have been ready for more than 100 years.

Before we had cars, we had horses that pulled buggies. The horses did not need anyone to drive them. They were able to find their way home with little or no help from humans. Traveling without a driver is not a new idea. It is simply a better way to travel.

Cars first appeared in the early 1900s. As more people began driving, the amount of car accidents went up. Modern technology has made driving safer, but too many people still get hurt in car accidents.

Too Many Car Crashes

One study found that more than 32,000 people die each year in car accidents in the United States. Another 2.5 million people are hurt in accidents each year.

((Almost 95 out of every 100 of these accidents are caused by human mistakes. That figure comes from the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA). This government agency works to make America's roads safe.))

We accept all of these accidents because cars are very useful. Self-driving cars are even more useful. Self-driving cars allow people to do other things instead of driving. People could text on their phones, work or just relax.

Self-driving cars use many forms of technology to drive themselves. Radar, cameras and other sensors help the car "see" the world around it. Computers drive the car from one place to another. People do not drive at all. These cars should soon be ready for everyday use.

Self-driving cars remove many of the human mistakes that cause accidents. They also help people who cannot drive themselves get from place to place.

Ready Or Not, Here They Come

lower insurance costs

Then there is the fact that cars are expensive to buy. The gas that fuels cars is expensive — too. People also have to buy insurance to protect themselves. A good insurance plan might pay for all the damage caused by an accident. Insurance can cost hundreds of dollars each month. That cost that would be lower with self-driving cars.

expensive

In some ways self-driving cars are already here. Some of the newest safety improvements in cars come very close to self-driving. New technology can control a car's speed and keep it in its lane. Technology can also help with parking. These are all steps toward a future full of self-driving cars.

Of course, self-driving cars will not be perfect. There will still be a few accidents. There will be some people who will never give up driving their cars themselves. Other people will live in areas where self-driving cars simply may not work.

Self-driving cars help people in so many ways. It makes little difference if Americans are ready for them. Ready or not, self-driving cars will soon be here.

Drawing Conclusions/ Making Generalizations

- When we make a generalization, we compare the pieces of evidence presented to us by an author and determine what they have in common.
- Then we draw a conclusion, or make a statement, that is true for the most of the pieces of evidence and that would be true most of the time.
